Three Days a Tramp.

[From the New York Sun.] Two gentlemen were talking in front of the St. James Hotel an evening or two ago, and a shabbily-dressed man asked them for a little assistance to get something to eat. He had just been repulsed by a group of four who stood near by, one saying, unfeelingly, "Oh, get on, you tramp." "I've been there myself," said one gentleman to the other, as he fished in his pocket for a quarter. After the poor fellow had expressed his gratitude and moved off, this conversation ensued:

"You say you've been there yourself. How's that?" "Why, a short time ago I went out to Chicago, and on my way back stopped over in Cleveland. There I stopped too long. I had friends in Cleveland, but didn't like the notion of borrowing money. Having enough to buy a ticket to Salamanca, I bought it, and had a few dimes left over. I had a railroad friend in Salamanca whom I had often favored, and I knew he'd favor me. As soon as I arrived there I'd be all right. So I went. I reached Salamanca at dawn the next morning only to learn to my George Benthell (colored) will preach at the disgust that my friend was in Cincinnati. I Primitive Baptist church at 11 A. ... Well, what shall I do?' "His only reply was, 'All aboard!' and the train moved out. There I was, deadbroke, a stranger, in the meanest place in New York State, and as hungry as the deuce." "And what did you do?"

"I cursed that conductor to begin with. Then I reflected. I had friends in Binghamton; all I wanted was to get there. didn't want my employers to hear I was in such a fix. I was ashamed. There was no train going until night. So I thought, partly for the fun of it, I'd walk on a few miles, board the next train, find somebody that I knew, and get through. I left my valise at the express office-after putting on a clean shirt in a dark room at the depotand started off, angry, but as proud as Na-of the way I walked on the railroad-track, but I found the wagon-road much easier walking. I got to Portville, N. Y., as I said before, at 5 P. M., and thought I was on the Erie road. I felt like swearing when the telegraph-operator told me that I was on the line of the Buffalo and Erie, and that the Erie road was seven miles away. I had left it at Olean.

"Can you send a dispatch and receive a telegraphic money-order here?" I asked. "'No, sir; you would receive a telegraph money-order at Olean, seven miles back.'

"How far is it?" "'Forty-six miles."

"Great heavens!" "But I was bound to go it or die. I peared mysteriously from Nantucket in the hadn't eaten anything for a day and a night. Having two nickels left, I invested one in

An insurance adjuster went to see a man crackers and cheese. It was nearly 7 o'clock in the evening then. After feasting on the roadside, I started off on the railroad-bed. I hadn't walked a mile before a man overtook me, carrying a basket on his arm. He was just returning from his work. He bade me good evening, and we got to talking. I told him that I was on my way to Emporium, and that I had to walk. He generously asked me to go home with him; and when I saw he was sincere I went. There I was treated like a prince. They were poor people, but good ones. At 11 in the morning I resumed my trip. After I walked twenty-four miles, a kind farmer gave me lodging, supper, and breakfast. He said: 'No one in distress shall pass my that no money-order by telegraph could smiled. New York Herald. reach me there. Two shall be born the whole wide world apart, And speak in different tongues, and have no thought Each of the other's being, and no need.

And these o'er unknown seas to unknown lands Shall cross, escaping wreck, defying death; And, all unconsciously, shape every act And bend each wandering step to his one end—That one day out of darkness they shall meet And read life's meaning in each other's eyes.

And two shall walk some narrow way of life, So nearly side by side that should one turn Ever so little space to left or right. They needs must stand acknowledged face to face. And yet, with wistful eyes that never meet. With groping hands that never clasp, and lips Calling in vain to lips that never hear. They seek each other all their weary days.
